About the Virginia Prison Justice Network

There are several statewide organizations that work to improve conditions for prisoners, amplify the voices of prisoners, establish a more effective penal system, or to implement alternatives to incarceration. By being a part of the Virginia Prison Justice Network, these organizations mobilize for actions, network and learn from one another, and build a movement across our state to create change in our carceral system and in the lives of prisoners and their families. Learn about these organizations. Family member and supporter involvement can help grow a movement for change. Get involved!

BTGIV's primary goal is to provide services that will enable returning citizens and individuals with adverse criminal records to readjust into society in order to abstain from criminal lifestyles. The program works with the judicial system and other agencies to aid in the wholesome spiritual, social and economic rehabilitation of the individual being released from the criminal justice system.

An all-volunteer, multi-issue organization working for the survival of our communities through education and social justice projects. We began in 2002 as a group of relatives of prisoners, concerned about the conditions in the state's jails and prisons. We correspond with inmates, speak at prisoner-organized events, support prisoner struggles and report on prison-related issues in our quarterly newspaper The Virginia Defender. We are a statewide organization based in Richmond, VA.

Contact/Contáctenos en: justicebburg@gmail.com or/o: Coalition for Justice, PO Box 299, Blacksburg, VA 24063

We are a 501c3 non-profit operating out of Blacksburg, VA, which was founded in 1981 in response to the US-backed "contra" war in Nicaragua, a large scale terrorist war, that claimed the lives of 78,000 people. Through the years, we have developed an intersectional approach to our work and recognize that all systems of oppression are interconnected and form a larger, overall system of domination. In 2017, we formed a Prison Justice Committee, which works to support the many disadvantaged groups within the prison system, recognizing that our group must be supported and must work collaboratively with those inside in order to support all oppressed peoples, so that no one falls through the cracks.

We seek to empower prisoners, advocate for them through our prisoner grievance work, and see other struggles (i.e. environmental, racial justice, food justice, economic equality etc.) through the lens of our prisoner/er justice work. We call for an end to mass incarceration and seek change to a repressive and unfair criminal justice system. We are proud to be a founding member of the Virginia Prison Justice Network and a sponsor for VAPOC (Virginia Prisoner of Conscience)

Humanities Behind Bars

In 2016, Dr. Meghan McDowell and Dr. Alison Reed, both professors at Old Dominion University, co-founded Humanities Behind Bars after facilitating a weekly reading group at Norfolk City Jail.

As they established this community partnership and educational ties between the university and jail, the Humanities Behind Bars (HBB) program grew into a grassroots collective of teachers, students, activists, and artists committed to imagining a just world. Our work is rooted in community-based education and organizing that centers formerly and currently incarcerated people and their loved ones.

In addition to teaching and learning with incarcerated students at Norfolk City Jail, Humanities Behind Bars facilitates critical spaces in the Tidewater community. For example, we offer a reading and film series, Humanity Without Bars, for collective study and critique of the Prison Industrial Complex. We also facilitate a reading group on prison pedagogy. Our political education program thus models our commitment to cultivating inside/outside alliances and abolitionist praxis.

Interfaith Action for Human Rights, a Mid-Atlantic coalition of faith communities and people of faith, brings action, education and advocacy to eliminate the practice of solitary confinement of prisoners in state facilities in Maryland, the District of Columbia, and Virginia.

IAHR's network of multi-faith, multi-ethnic and multi-racial groups seeks to change the culture, policy and practices that violate the human rights of prisoners held in correctional facilities.

We believe that: Solitary confinement is a form of psychological torture; Solitary confinement is costly and ineffective; Short-term confinement of juveniles, the mentally ill and other vulnerable prisoners poses grave risks to the health and rehabilitation of these prisoners. Guided by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the wisdom of our respective faiths, IAHR advocates for more just and compassionate laws and policies.

Through pastoral outreach, educational efforts and legislative advocacy, IAHR engages and mobilizes faith communities, families, the media, elected and appointed officials, and the general public.

RIHD was founded in 2002 by Lilly Brant Kennedy, retired from a US Government career, in response to the barriers she experienced while engaging the criminal justice system on behalf of a family member who had been given an egregiously long sentence. RIHD formed with other volunteers in a similar situation to educate and empower Virginia families and communities on the negative impact of a racially disparate system to mass incarceration and provide educational outreach to reduce the level of societal disenfranchisement of people with a criminal record.

An award-winning all-volunteer statewide organization known for its low-cost transportation service to faraway Virginia rural prisons. Sentencing reform, sentencing guidelines, restoration of civil and voting rights, and ban the box for fair hiring in the workplace are just some of the ways RIHD has helped ordinary Virginia to understand and navigate the criminal justice system and bring about necessary reform.

Richmond Jericho

The Jericho Movement,
 P.O. Box 2164, Chesterfield, VA 23832

Email: richmondjericho@gmail.com

We strive to maintain a nonsectarian movement that supports revolutionary prisoners of all stripes, and other political dissidents within prison walls. We define a political prisoner as anyone imprisoned for acting on their political beliefs. Jericho is a movement with the defined goal of gaining recognition of the fact that political prisoners and prisoners of war exist inside of the United States, despite the United States' government's continued denial ... and winning amnesty and freedom for these political prisoners.

The Jericho Movement grew out of a call for a national march on the White House during Spring Break of 1998 by political prisoner Jalil Muntaqim. The call was made in October of 1996 through the Provisional Government–Republic of New Afrika and the New Afrikan Liberation Front, but the organizers decided to use this opportunity to jumpstart a much needed movement to build a national support organization for political prisoners in general.

The March 27, 1998 demonstration was just the beginning of a whole new commitment to support these political prisoners and demand recognition and amnesty for them. There are hundreds of people who went to prison as a result of their work on the streets against oppressive conditions like indecent housing and inadequate or complete lack of medical care, lack of quality education, police brutality and the murder of people organizing for independence and liberation. These people belonged to organizations like the Black Panther Party, La Raza Unida, FALN, Los Macheteros, North American Anti-Imperialist Movement, May 19th, AIM, the Black Liberation Army, etc., and were incarcerated because of their political beliefs and acts in support of and/or in defense of freedom.

Once the demonstration was over, the real work began. The Jericho Organizing Committees that came into being around this work continue educating people about the existence of these political prisoners. The original structure designed to mobilize people to go to the White House and serve notice that we will no longer allow our political prisoners to be behind prison walls with no support, and that work is being done to free them, has been transformed into a mass-based organizing tool.

At the present time there are Jericho Organizing Committees operating in Albuquerque, NM, Chicago, IL, Los Angeles, CA, New York, NY, Portland, OR, Richmond VA and Italy, and regional committees functioning across the country.

By doing this there is a more balanced understanding of what is going on in Prison.
